

JurisLock's CISO Advisory Services

The cybersecurity field is experiencing a talent shortage at every job level, and finding an experienced, well-qualified Chief Information Security Officer (CISO) in today's competitive information security job market can be challenging, time-consuming and expensive.

However, too much is at stake to not have a CISO on your team to help drive the strategic direction of your cyber program. All security programs need a security leader that has the specialized technical knowledge and corporate governance experience to help build a strong cyber security program that will mitigate today's evolving threats.

JurisLock's team of experts includes former security leaders from a variety of industries who can align information security strategies with your company's unique need, set strategic cyber objectives to build a resilient security program, and establish clear communication with the executive leadership and board of directors.

Whether you are looking for CISO advisory to help with longer-term program development or just temporary advisory services to fill a gap in your program, CISO advisory services are built to provide the leadership you need, when you need it.

Benefits of a CISO Advisory Service
